When I check it online, it says that my serial number is not verified. What this means? And .I'd write one, but the challenge we put on ourselves is a whole lot harder than everyone thinks. So, why not write a list of the 25 books I'm most looking forward to this year? You can, too. A Series of Unfortunate Events by Neil Gaiman and Lemony Snicket (July 27, Bloomsbury) I love Gaiman and loved Snicket's A Series of Unfortunate Events, and I'm excited to see them combine forces in such a perfect and sinister setting. Devils in the Grain by Jennifer van Heest (July 17, Bloomsbury) Van Heest has written a compelling mix of sci-fi and thriller set in a world where love and sorcery are intertwined. Salvage by Robert Graves (July 17, Canongate) You know I love Robert Graves, and this is the autobiography of his great-grandfather in which he talks about the places he visited and the riddles he solved. It also includes an account of Graves' life with his brother, the late Sir Michael. Kitchen Cat by Jason Fried (July 24, Little, Brown) After a career as a hip-hop lyricist, Jason Fried left the music business to pursue his dream of writing a book about running a business. I'm looking forward to reading that. The Bone Clocks by David Mitchell (July 24, Jonathan Cape) More David Mitchell! I love The Thousand f678ea9f9e
